

New at Louis: Clamping instead of lashing

Motorcycle accessories multinational Louis has added a new transport fixation to its range. It does not require lashing straps. The Lock-n-Load Pro from Risk Racing is designed for lightweight sporty Duros and cross bikes weighing up to just under 143 kilograms. The motorcycle stand consists of a base plate that is screwed into the vehicle floor. Two telescopic supports can then be inserted via the lateral guide rails, which clamp the footrests and thus hold the entire motorcycle.

As less pressure is exerted on them, the spring elements are also protected. The supports can be moved sideways and removed quickly. When not in use, only the flat base plate remains on the loading area. Although the fastening material is included, Louis recommends installation at a specialist workshop.

The Lock-n-Load Pro transport stand costs 318.99 euros. (aum)
